

Top Long Island restaurants of 2016: Eat here now

Your table is set. Newsday's A-list for dining out, the Top 100 Restaurants on Long Island during the last 12 months, is here.

The past year has been an exciting, volatile, creative, refreshing, topsy-turvy time for restaurants in Nassau and Suffolk — and for their customers, too. With 10 cuisine categories including Italian, Chinese, seafood and steak houses, see which eateries are near you, and which are worth a drive. Just remember to bring an appetite, come to the table — and eat here now.

Guy and Maria Reuge's restaurant now emphasizes farm-to-table, but you'll find the French and New American fare that also has kept it among Long Island's best. Mirabelle and Mirabelle Tavern are in the Three Village Inn. Recommended: lobster salad with chilled lobster bisque; local oysters; charcuterie; Kobe beef sliders; the Tavern burger; roasted Berkshire pork loin with red onion marmalade and apple cider gastrique; strip steak with blue cheese-and-potato gratin; the duck Mirabelle; the nine-course tasting menu; all desserts.
