Four hundred revelers packed The Mansion at Oyster Bay to celebrate the 15th annual Long Island Press Power List honoring the region's most influential business, nonprofit and political leaders on April 12.

The much-anticipated party and networking event followed the recent publication of the Press Power List. Honorees were each awarded a special crystal ball, symbolizing their ability to shape the future of the Island.

"Abraham Lincoln once said, 'Nearly all men can stand adversity, but if you want to test a man's character, give him power,'" ABC News anchor Diane Macedo, a Mineola native, said while emceeding the awards ceremony portion of the evening. "You've been given power and you have responded by using your power for good. That is what the Power List is all about."

Honorees ranged from nonprofit leaders such as Theresa Regnante, President and CEO of United Way Long Island, who was inducted into the Power List Hall of Fame for being on the list five times, to business executives such as PSEG Long Island President and CEO Daniel Eichhorn and political power brokers such as New York State Senate Majority Leader John Flanagan (R-Northport).

"Many ask how the list is comprised," Long Island Press Co-publisher Victoria Schneps-Yunis told the crowd. "I can tell you there are many months of painstaking internal deliberations to determine who will be on the Power List. And of course, there are those who lobby to get on... But at the end of the day, only the truly influential make it."

Those who made the list were fêted by their powerful peers.

"I am deeply humbled to be included on The Long Island Press Power List alongside an impressive roster of renowned and respected leaders, many of whom are friends and colleagues," said Adam Silvers, Managing Partner of the Uniondale-based law firm of Ruskin Moscou Faltischek, P.C. "Most significantly, this honor is a reflection upon our entire Ruskin Moscou Faltischek team of brilliant and dedicated attorneys who work hard every day to help our clients succeed."
