

(Credit: Daniel Brennan)

Sandbar in Cold Spring Harbor and more eateries to try during Winter Long Island Restaurant Week.

Winter Long Island Restaurant Week 2017: Try discounted meals at these eateries

Updated January 16, 2017 10:50 AM
By Gary Duff Special to Newsday

Whether you're craving lusty Italian, spicy Mexican, refined Japanese or even the comforting familiar tastes of the American cheeseburger, the new winter Long Island Restaurant Week is the perfect time to bundle up and get out for dinner at a discount.

Usually offered in the fall and spring, the three-course, fixed-price meal for $27.95 a person is being offered by more than 100 restaurants across Long Island. The promotion runs Jan. 22-29, though certain restaurants may only offer the discount on Saturday until 7 p.m.

Reservations are a good idea. For more information and a list of all participating restaurants, go to longislandrestaurantweek.com.

ADVERTISEMENT

BUYPOWER CARD

GET THE CARD THAT HELPS YOU GET THE CAR

Capital One

LEARN MORE >

ADVERTISE HERE

Sandbar

(Credit: Daniel Brennan)

Sandbar (55 Main St, Cold Spring Harbor): Sandbar Chef Guy Reuge may hail from France, but at Sandbar he delivers his delicious take on New American cooking. For Restaurant Week, start with either the tuna tartare paired with avocado and a crispy crostini or the seasonal Long Island clam chowder. Later, indulge in scallops with butternut squash risotto for an extra $8, or a 12-ounce, dry-aged strip steak with green peppercorn sauce alongside creamed spinach and steak fries, for an added cost of $13. Dessert should include either the walnut chocolate tart or crème brûlée. More info: 631-498-6188, sandbarli.com