December is a celebratory month. Here are three restaurants that are good stops for holiday festivities and for the food year-round.

View in Oakdale delivers a grand view of Great South Bay to go with its generally American menu. Recommended: raw oysters, crab cocktail, yellowfin tuna tartare, calamari with peanuts and a sweet chili glaze, shredded iceberg lettuce salad, kale salad with beets and goat cheese, chickpea fries with Sriracha aioli, roasted swordfish, dry-aged New York strip steak, roasted chicken, root beer-braised short rib, tuna BLT. Moderate to expensive.

The Palm Court is in The Carltun complex in Eisenhower Park. It's a traditionally handsome dining room with fine service and a New American accent. Recommended: seafood raw plate, shrimp cocktail, tuna poke, beet and goat cheese salad, duck with lingonberry sauce, dry-aged rib-eye steak, Cedar River strip steak, grilled Berkshire pork chop with sweet and hot cherry peppers, herb-crusted rack of lamb, pan-seared black sea bass with bay scallops. Expensive.

Jewel in Melville is popular for business and social gatherings. The buoyant main dining area sometimes sounds as if more than one party is underway. Recommended: grilled oysters; Taleggio cheese, fig and prosciutto pizza; butter-poached lobster; duck breast with wild rice and blackberry gastrique; T-bone steak with Bearnaise butter and roasted garlic; pulled pork sandwich; Angus beef brisket burger; "The Chocolate Bag" dessert. Moderate to expensive.
